About the Program

The City of Mercer Island P-Patch was established behind the former Mercer View Elementary School in conjunction with the Earth Day Movement of 1977. Now located behind the Mercer Island Community and Event Center (MICEC), within Luther Burbank Park, the current P-Patch occupies approximately 49,000 sq. ft. (1.1 acre) of park space. The P-Patch includes approximately 50 - 60 plots that vary in size, slope, and visual appearance which are cultivated by participants.

Mercer Island Parks and Recreation staff are responsible for the coordination and management of the P-Patch program, which includes establishing guidelines, assigning plots, communicating with participants, collecting program fees, and performing routine area maintenance such as delivering wood chips, providing access to irrigation, trash and debris removal, and maintaining pathways.

Purpose Statement:

The Mercer Island P-Patch is a community garden program coordinated by the City of Mercer Island and cultivated by Mercer Island residents through environmentally sustainable practices. The P-Patch program provides the opportunity for participants to grow food and ornamental plantings within individual plots enabling opportunities for connections within the community, increased food security, and improved physical and mental health for visitors and participants alike.

Program Objectives

- Provide and allocate designated plot areas for community garden activities.
- Enable gardening and gathering opportunities which improve both mental and physical health.
- Align participation with maintaining the natural character of the park and minimize unnatural physical and visual impacts to the surrounding park and neighborhood area.
- Provide an environment that enables participants of different ages and demographics to come together, interact, and cultivate meaningful relationships through gardening.
- Utilize garden plots and the surrounding area to enhance biodiversity and contribute to the preservation of the environment.
